

NEW AUSSIE BUILT BAILEY

The Bailey Rangefinder Comet is an impressive mix of spacious, modern-living packed into a lightweight, yet super tough caravan – it's a long-term tourer's dream

Bailey have truly exceeded themselves when it comes to the design and construction of their new Rangefinder Comet caravan. With over 68 years of experience in caravan design under their belt, it's no surprise that Bailey have been able to create such a tough and light weight van. The Comet has been locally built in Australia and destruction tested in Victoria, to ensure that every aspect is built to withstand our harsh conditions. Bailey have also used their expert understanding of design to create one of the lightest vans on the market, meaning RVers have more freedom of choice with their tow vehicle. However, low tare doesn't mean that modern-features have been compromised, with the entire van sporting high-grade appliances and spacious, open-plan living. Not only is the Rangefinder Comet packed with accessories, it also features a huge amount of storage. However, that's not the best part, the Rangefinder Comet has a payload of up to 600kg! This means vanners can actually utilise the tonnes of storage available.

UNIQUE FEATURES

- BAILEY PATENTED ALU-TECH CONSTRUCTION SYSTEM
- UNIQUE 'FLUSH MOUNT' SLIDE-OUT EAST/WEST BED
- AERODYNAMIC PROFILE TO ASSIST WITH STABILITY AND FUEL EFFICIENCY
- TWIN 105L WATER TANKS
- UP TO 600KG PAYLOAD

STATE OF THE ART INTERIOR

Vanners won't believe just how much space has been packed in to the Bailey Rangefinder Comet. RVers will love the west/east bed, which uses a unique 'flush mount' slide-out wall to add an extra 600mm of interior space to the bedroom. There's also a retractable 32" TV at the foot of the bed, which is a welcome change to wall-mounted systems. The huge leather-look club lounge in the front of the van is also made for entertaining and can be converted into a bed for that extra level of convenience. RVers won't have to worry about finding ways to add more room in the lounge either, with the foldable table able to be removed and stored in a dedicated area when not in use. Bailey have centred their entire design around maximising interior space, so that RVers can relax and unwind in any room, which is an aspect that will no doubt win vanners over for years to come.

EXTERNAL FEATURES

- CHASSIS: Austral RV duragal steel chassis with zinc primer and top coat paint system
- FRAME CONSTRUCTION: Body shell panels are bonded and bolted to a bespoke aluminium extrusion framework that provides unrivalled structural rigidity
- OUTER SKIN: Body shell panels are built using 'timber free' construction: incorporating a composite plastic internal skeleton, high-density polystyrene insulation and impact-resistant fibreglass outer skin lining
- INSULATION: High density polystyrene insulation for superior thermal qualities
- SUSPENSION: 7 leaf spring rocker-roller suspension. Optional upgrade to Cruisemaster CRS independent coil suspension
- WATER TANKS: Twin 105L fresh water tanks. Twin 140L water tanks and grey water conversion (Optional)
- WHEELS: 15" alloy wheels with Dominator wheel rims

- SOLAR PANELS: 150W solar panels (Optional)

There's nothing worse than having an incredible amount of storage space with no payload to match – and this is where the Bailey Comet excels. Their smart design has kept weight low and payload high, with loads of storage for RVers to utilise. There's dedicated exterior storage for awkward or bulky items, and a number of spacious cupboards in almost every area of the interior. The large under-bed exterior tops off this already remarkable amount of space.

STRONG AND LIGHTWEIGHT – HOW THEY DO IT!

As with any Bailey caravan, the Rangefinder Comet utilises their patented Alu-Tech construction system, featuring a five-part fibreglass sandwich panel construction system, it has been destruction tested at the Australian Automotive Research Centre in Victoria. The use of this system means that structural strength and rigidity are drastically improved. Their frame construction is also quite remarkable; with their body shell panels bonded and bolted to custom-made aluminium framework, which is both light weight and incredibly strong. This is how they achieve their exceptional payload of 600kg, whilst still packing it with large bathrooms, bedrooms and high-grade appliances. RVers looking to travel in all types of weather will also appreciate the high-density insulation and impact-resistant fibreglass outer skin, which is renowned for its superior thermal qualities. The complete lack of timber in the frame will also safeguard owners against future wood-rot, which is a major bonus.

The Bailey Rangefinder Comet comes standard with twin 105L water tanks and the option to upgrade to twin 140L tanks with grey water, which means less time seeking resources and more time camping. The 100Ah deep cycle AGM batteries are a huge bonus, and come in a fully sealed box with dedicated storage for optimal protection. To top it all off, RVers can choose to upgrade to solar panels and really enjoy life off the grid.

The single-span front roof panel creates an aerodynamic profile for the Bailey Rangefinder Comet and assists with stability on the road, making the van much easier to tow. The innovative design also assists with fuel efficiency, as the wind flow is drastically improved, creating less drag on the van at all times – how's that for smart design!
